

What to Do and When to Do It

When a student's behaviour is not meeting expectations it can become challenging for teachers and other students alike. There is no better intervention than an early one, what we refer to at Ripple as a 'Soft Touch Intervention', to ensure that the student's behaviour is contained.

Come and join us online and discover how to interpret the Ripple data and what to do to help a student, and when the right time is to intervene.

You will learn to:

- Understand a student's challenging behaviour
- Interpret Ripple Heatmaps
- Know the difference between Soft, Medium and Hard Touch interventions
- Learn when to use different types of interventions for the most effective outcome.
